

Visual	Dialogue
A father is talking indistinctly at his son. The child looks confused and a thought bubble appears above their head with random symbols and a question mark.	Father: [Speaking indistinctly]
The child taps their ears, showing they cannot hear. The father seems perplexed by this and taps his mouth while thinking to himself.	Son: Stop! I can't hear you.
The father is seen walking in an Auslan tutoring building.
In a classroom, the father is seen learning the Auslan alphabet. An Auslan teacher is referring to an alphabet chart displaying the Auslan fingerspelling handshapes for A, B, C, D, E and F. The father copies the teacher signing the letters A, B and C. The teacher affirms his attempts each time. A light bulb appears over the father's head.	Teacher: A.            Father: A.            Teacher: Good! B.            Father: B.            Teacher: Good! C.            Father: C.            Teacher: Great!            Father: Great! Thank you!
The father and son are seen happily signing together. Light bulbs appear over their heads.	Father: Hello! I'm Signing! Perfect!            Son: Great!